Shipp Joins Diamond C Ranch Staff

Lee Shipp, D.V.M., a 1980 Graduate of Texas A&M joined the staff of Diamond C Ranch as resident embryologist and veterinarian on November 1, 1983. Dr. Shipp has worked with embryo transfer in the Simmental industry for the past three years at both Rio Vista Genetics and Longier Embryo Transfer, proving himself to be one of the top embryologists in the world.

Diamond C Ranch's decision to go to a 100% embryo transfer breeding program made this position available.

SHIPP.
Starting in May 1984, every calf born at the Diamond C will be an embryo transfer calf. "This will enable us to have all 800 of our calves born at the Diamond C Ranch to be out of our best 25 to 30 cows. This progressive step is one of the ways we will be able to continue our leadership position in the Simmental industry," states John B. Collier IV, General Manager of Diamond C Ranch.

U.S. Beef Sales Increase To Japan

In a teleconference presentation to the U.S. Meat Export Federation's (MEF) Annual Board of Directors meeting in Denver yesterday, MEF Asian Director Phil Seng reported that the U.S. continues to increase its percentage share of Japan's imported beef market. During the first 9 months of 1983, Seng said, the U.S. shipped 43,893 metric tons (MT) or $193.4 million of beef and veal to Japan, compared to 36,506 MT or $159.7 million during the same period in 1982. He attributed this increase to consumer demand and the Government of Japan's commitment to meet its Multilateral Trade Negotiations obligations.

Seng also reported that the U.S. had increased its percentage share of Japan's variety meats market 8% this year, selling 30,820 MT or $66.3 million of variety meats to that market during the first nine months of 1983.

While the U.S. is expected to increase its sales of pork to Japan by 3% this year, Seng feels the prediction is optimistic due to dropping Japanese hog prices and competition from other suppliers. Outside of Japan, Seng predicted that South Korea could be the next major growth market in Asia.

He cited factors such as a rising Gross National Product, a population exceeding 40 million and an anticipated

With New Officers U.S. Animal Health Assn. Looks Ahead

Richmond, Va. — The U.S. Animal Health Association concluded its 1983 meeting in Las Vegas with recommendations aimed for the second century of cooperative state-federal efforts to prevent, control and stamp out animal diseases, according to J. O. Pearce, Jr., Pearce, an Okeechobee, Fla., cattle rancher, is the organization's new president, succeeding John R. Ragan of Nashville, Tenn. President-elect is David U. Walker of Montpelier, Vt.

Others elected to office at the USAHA's 87th annual meeting were: N.W. Kruse of Lincoln, Neb., 1st vice president; J.F. Hudson of Denver, Colo., 2nd vice president; J.A. Cobb of Atlanta, Ga., 3rd vice president; and J.C. Shook of Annapolis, Md., treasurer.

"USAHA supports plans to celebrate 100 years of animal health next year," said Pearce. "Congress created the old Bureau of Animal Industry in 1884 within the Department of Agriculture, to protect export markets of the nation's fledgling livestock industry through research, education and disease eradication measures."

"The BAI, as it was called, began working closely with the states and livestock producers groups to meet animal health problems head on. Such work is now carried on by successor agencies within the department."

"USAHA is recognized as the official voice of livestock producers and others in recommending changes to state and federal animal health regulations," he said. Among its 1983 recommendations, USAHA:

1 — Called for brucellosis vaccination of all female dairy calves moving into or out of all states except those recognized as brucellosis-free. The same recommendation would apply to female calves of beef breeds moving into or out of high-incidence states or areas (those with "C" classification).

2 — Praised the fulfillment of its earlier recommendation that USDA establish a national leptospirosis center.

3 — Identified research needs in two areas: 1) A better diagnostic test for contagious equine influenza; 2) A new insecticide for horn flies. The pests are becoming resistant to those in current use.

4 — Reaffirmed support for uniform regulations throughout the United States to assure safety and efficacy of all veterinary biological products. The association favors vesting necessary authority in USDA and strongly supports the concept of an animal biological law.

5 — Voted support for pilot projects underway in Ohio and Tennessee that are expected lead to development of a national animal disease surveillance system.

6 — Expressed concern about serious outbreaks of avian influenza in Pennsylvania, noting the risk of spread and threat of wider losses to poultry producers.

"USAHA's 1984 meeting will be held Oct. 22-24 in Fort Worth, Texas," said Pearce. "Meanwhile, we'll be following up on the 1983 recommendations of our organization."

2nd Ave. Restaurant
Edgemont, South Dakota

The famous and historic Bar T Ranch on Hat Creek southeast of Edgemont, SD, and north of Ardmore, SD. Landers.

The ranch consists of 10,200 acres of some heavy timber with about 1,800 acres of tillable land. Ranch has 5 miles of Hat Creek running through it (a running stream, open in the winter). PRORICH FEEDS

FROM THE HEART OF THE ROCKIES.

A Testimonial...

"This past winter I used Prorich supplemental feed on my cow herd. I was very pleased with the results. As the cattle came through the winter in better condition than ever before. The cattle stayed off immediately and cycled earlier. Having used different feeds in the past I can appreciate the values of the Prorich formula."

Geographers Say High Study Ignored While Perceptions

Chickasha, Kan. - Texas property owners control the use of their own land. But in Kansas water is property, managed by state agencies.

The controversial, federally-funded Plains Ogallala Aquifer Study, released late last year, ignores these facts. The study, managed by state agencies, is a public perception of the water depletion problem, said two Kansas State University geographers.

Richard Kromm and Stephen Edwards have launched a two-year, $10,000 project to collect this information which they believe will be a useful supplement to the High Plains Study.

By next spring they will be ready to survey some 3,000 residents in the state High Plains area and make their preliminary findings available in the summer of 1984.

Congress authorized in 1973 that the Department of Commerce, the Army Corps of Engineers, and the six states - Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, and Nebraska - study problems associated with declining Ogallala Aquifer groundwater levels for agricultural irrigation in those states. Since release of the report last December, it has become the subject of much discussion among people, groundwater managers, and legislators in the affected area, the geographers said.

"There's nothing wrong or weak about the High Plains Study. It does what it is intended to do," said White, who is head of the KSU Department of Geography.

However, it's hard to come to grips with the issues. The study's recommendation consider the region as a whole and not individual states and their legal differences. Nor does it address how people want to have their groundwater managed and by whom.

The K-State scientists are documenting the variety of existing laws and the groundwater management groups that operate in the six states. When they are completed this fall, the study will be used to list various alternative management strategies and institutional arrangements.

Their survey questionnaire will present these alternatives to people living in selected counties in each of the six states. The counties, which have not been identified, are to be representative of all the 186 counties in the Ogallala water area.

The geographers want to question a wide spectrum of people who depend on water from the Ogallala. Included will be city dwellers, dry land and irrigation farmers, well drillers, and farm implement dealers.

Using statistical analyses, the geographers then will determine the public preferences for groundwater management strategies and control institutions. They also will point out regional differences of opinion.

To illustrate some of these regional differences, Kromm went back to the Texas-Kansas situation. Preliminary findings, he said, shows the two states are opposite in groundwater management thinking.

Both states have created local groundwater management districts. In Texas the district officials serve as a liaison between irrigators and the state to promote efficient use of groundwater. The Texas district officials' lobby against any state groundwater regulation and promote the property owners' view.

Kromm said, "The geographers think that legal and management arrangements in the other four states are not as clear as the Texas-Kansas situation."

New Mexico and Nebraska have common systems. Theoretically groundwater control rests at the local level, but in fact it's more state control. The Texas situation is a can of worms, because it has so many legal variables. Both Oklahoma looks at the problem entirely from the state level," Kromm said.

The two men are doing in parallel a similar study they completed in 1981 on Kansas public groundwater.

Geographers Say High Plains Study Ignored Public Perceptions

(CONT. FROM PAGE 21) perceptions of groundwater problems. For that project they surveyed 1,500 Kansans living in Groundwater Management District No. 3, which covers 18 southwestern Kansas counties. Their current study has been funded by the General Services Foundation, a private research foundation in St. Paul, Minn., for the period July 1, 1983, to July 1, 1985. "We hope our study will be a useful reference tool to show the existing groundwater management institutions, how they operate and vary within the six High Plains states. Regulators and policy formulators will want to know the attitudes and preferences of their constituents," White said.

Leasing Vs. Buying Farm Equipment

College Station — When a farmer needs new equipment, is leasing or buying the better option? Dr. Ashley Lovell of Stephen F. Austin State University, an agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, has analyzed these options for some alternative data obtained from several farm equipment dealers. Total net cash flow after taxes indicated a negligible difference between leasing or buying, Lovell said. However, after annual net cash flow were converted or discounted to present dollar values, buying was estimated to be $383 less expensive than leasing for one set of data which was analyzed. "However, one should not mistakenly conclude that buying is always less expensive than leasing," Lovell cautioned. "Different assumptions about discount rates and income tax factors can significantly affect costs of the options." Results of an analysis several years ago by Dr. John Hopkins, professor of agricultural economics at Texas A&M University, indicated that the cash purchase choice was best at a low opportunity cost of capital, says Lovell. Hopkins also found that credit purchases were optimum over medium discount rates and leasing was the most profitable method at high opportunity rates of return. Lovell's study reveals that cost differences between various leasing representing various brands of equipment ranged as widely as differences between buying and leasing. "In the 1980s, many producers may decide that leasing rather than traditional owning of equipment is the best alternative," says Lovell. "They need to identify advantages and shortcomings of financial leases. Just as in financing equipment purchases, read and weigh the lease contract. Seek complete farm management, legal and tax advice before trying something new," he advises.

NCA Appeals Block's EPA Ban On 2,4,5-T Herbicide

Washington — A joint protest filed by several manufacturers and agricultural trade associations, including the National Cattlemen's Association, has blocked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) from completely banning the herbicide 2,4,5-T, now widely used to control brush on rangelands.

EPA on Oct. 14 moved to permanently prohibit all uses of 2,4,5-T, after Dow Chemical Co., the major U.S. manufacturer of the herbicide, withdrew from EPA hearings conducted since 1979 on the safety of 2,4,5-T. Dow said that it continued to believe that the herbicide was harmless but that its legal costs of $10 million were far exceeding any chance of making a profit from 2,4,5-T sales.

The recently filed joint appeal charged that the notice of cancellation issued by EPA following Dow's announcement was illegal because it did not present legally required evidence that 2,4,5-T was harmful to man or the environment. Dow's withdrawal from the previous hearings is "not a sufficient or lawful basis" for cancelling 2,4,5-T, the appeal said. The groups asked EPA to rescind its new and previous cancellation notices or to hold a hearing on the risks and benefits of 2,4,5-T, before any ban on currently permissible uses is put into effect and before the emergency ban on other uses is made permanent.

EPA may not deny the request for a hearing, and while such hearing is being conducted, use of 2,4,5-T on rangelands, rice fields, orchards and sugarcane fields must be allowed to continue unless the agency decides to invoke emergency powers to suspend such uses while the hearing is going on, as it did in 1979 in regard to forestry, right-of-way and pasture uses. The recently filed appeal includes a request that the hearing also cover these other uses.

Wool & Mohair

Denver, Nov. 23 (USDA) — Trading on domestic wool at a standstill with no sales confirmed. Mill activity good but inventories adequate for current needs. At the South African sale this week 740,000 pounds of mohair offered and sold to the trade with young goat and kid 2-1/2-5-1/2 higher and adult steady to weak in uneven trading.

Seventy-two buyers from 11 states took home this offering of mostly range-raised sales. One hundred ninety seven and one half lots grossed $527,825 to average $2872.

Top selling individual was a 1/2 interest and 1/4 possession of Jata Pride, the 1981 National Western Champion son of Jet going under the gavel of auc-ioneer Ken Trout to Genetic Dynamics of Salt Lake City. Genetic Dynamics is a public held corporation who will distribute some of Jata Pride. Second high selling bull was a 1/2 interest and 1/4 possession in Ultimate, a February 1983 bull calf now in importation from France. The purchaser was Webster and Twin Falls, Idaho.

High selling female was Lulaine, A 1976. She was bred to Jata Pride and sold to Larrie Adams of Twin Falls, Washington. Second high selling female was a 1982 daughter of James, bred to Max-I-Millan, going to Wayne Flint at Layton, Utah.

The offering of 3/4 and 7/8 non-fitted range bulls was the highlight of the sale as commercial cattlemen from throughout the West actively bid on raised in the Snake River Canyon. Many were repeat buyers as these range-raised bulls have established themselves as well.

If you command wisely, you'll be obeyed cheerfully.

Maine-Anjou News
From Throughout
North America

From The TMAA President . . .

Congratulations! Congratulations for making our summer show season such a success. It is very rewarding to see enthusiastic breeders work so hard to exhibit Maine-Anjou cattle.

The first show was held in mid-September in Abilene. This show, our first ever at the West Texas Fair, was run smoothly and successfully. If you see Tom Humber, Albany, Texas, tell him, excellent, because he did just that job. The show had 30 head of top quality cattle. Champion bull was shown by McBe Farms, Mt. Pleasant, Texas and Reserve was shown by Tom and Ann Humber, Albany, Texas. In the female division the Championship honors were captured by Steve Fryar, Brownwood, Texas in both the Open and Junior Shows. Reserve honors went to County-Line Ranches, Castile, Texas.

Next, the following week came the East Texas Fair Maine-Anjou Show and Sale. This was very successful as over 70 head of cattle were shown and over 30 sold in the sale. Many thanks go to Melvin Norfleet, Mt. Pleasant, Texas for his hard work in heading up these two events. The sale saw 85 lots averaging $1207 with many of these being weaned calves. In the show, the Champion bull was again exhibited by McBe Farms, Mt. Pleasant, Texas and Reserve by Sonderregger Maine-Anjou, Westcliffe, Colo. The Champion female honors went to County-Line Ranches, Castile, Texas and Reserve to Sonderregger. Congratulations everyone!

The ball continues to roll. Membership dues and completed questionnaires continue to find their way to Marie Hooper's desk. Data from the questionnaires will be compiled, and a current membership list will be available in the not-too-distant future. A good attendance for the gathering and meeting at Canton - plenty of eating time before the now "famous" covered dish luncheon - the informal open meeting gave everyone an opportunity to have their say.

Planning begins for the annual field day - with a strong committee gathering bids and figures for a prospective sale to be held that same evening - the sale to be planned and executed by the membership. This presents another challenge to ACTION - something for everyone to actively participate in. (Is it some thought. Jet down your dues and send them to us.)

SWPA and East Texas Breeders Assn. will again be represented at APA Annual Show and Sale at National Animal Show in Denver in January '84. All members who possibly can, are urged to attend and take part in APA Annual membership meeting, show, and sale.

Calaway Elected 14th APHA President

The APHA Board of Directors met during the 1983 National Convention at Nashville, Tenn., to elect the officers and Executive Committee members that will guide the Association during the 1983-84 year.

Elected to serve as President was Malcolm Calaway, Victoria, Texas. A livestock nutritionist, cattle rancher and long-time Paint Horse breeder, exhibitor and judge, Calaway has served as a national director for eight years, on both the Judges' and the Show and Contest Committees, and has been a member of the Executive Committee since 1979, most recently as the first vice president of the APHA. He and his wife, Susan, have one son.

As president during the coming year, Calaway will work toward increased member unity and sound fiscal management. Among his goals are to steer the Association back to the basics of family activity and overall participation. The following have been chosen to serve during the 1983-84 year:

President-Elect: Briley (Bud) Shoemaker, Vice President: Bill Bryan, Fourth Committee Member: Al Reece, Fifth Committee Member: Dale Fell and Sixth Committee Member: Tom Arlander. Immediate past president will be Fred Adam.

WE ARE ALWAYS HARD on our faults when we see them in others. Perhaps the reason is that we know how inexcusable they are.

Safety Tips For LP-Gas Space Heaters

Austin — As the weather gets colder, Texas who depend on LP-gas for fuel are getting their LP-gas space heaters out of storage and setting them up. According to Hugh P. Koopers, director of the Liquefied Petroleum Gas Division of the Railroad Commission, following a few safety rules can stop fires or accidents involving space heaters.

First, thoroughly clean space heaters by removing dust and any rust flaking in and around the burners. These can produce incomplete combustion and dangerous yellow flames. When burning safely, an LP-gas flame is blue. Carbon monoxide gas, both odorless and deadly, can be produced if burners or burner parts are clogged.

Check air adjustment settings on the burners to make sure they'll give the proper air-to-gas mixture. Never place space heaters near curtains, furniture or facing a wall. Replace broken or missing radiants. All unvented type space heaters need a ventilated room to support combustion. Slightly open a window when using unvented type heaters. This gets outside air into the house and prevents carbon monoxide buildup.

Don't use space heaters designed for outside venting without proper venting. All flue gases must be taken out of a home. Inside a home, flue gases can be very dangerous.

Have a licensed LP-gas dealer check heaters if there's the slightest concern about properly connecting or adjusting them. Check all vents for any obstruction. A birds nest, for example, can prevent the escape of flue gases. Don't place space heaters in walking areas where someone can trip over the heater or its hose. Connect all LP-gas heaters with an approved LP-gas hose with proper flare fittings. Slip or hose connections are prohibited and are dangerous. Cap off cooker or gas stops not in use. The hose, children or pets from accidentally turning on a valve. Never put your face or clothing near a heater when lighting it.

A "little ear" on feeder calves has become an important marketing factor in recent years.

Some feeders are demanding that their order buyers select calves with some Brahman in their genetic make-up.

We think one of the best tools available to put a "little ear" on your feeder calves is to turn out a Beefmaster bull.

Contact the N.B.A. for a list of breeders who have breeding age Beefmaster bulls for sale.

The Foundation was established by the American Angus Association to honor the men and women who, working tirelessly to make Angus cattle and the American Angus Association leaders in the beef cattle world.
The first 50 inductees include George Grant, the man to import the Angus cattle into the United States in 1878; James Anderson and George Findlay, Illinois businessmen who established the first registered Angus herd, on down to a few people who are living and active in the business today. The program will be ongoing. By five new people will be inducted into the Foundation each year. The list of selection was made by a committee of noted Angus breeders, agricultural journalists and Association leaders.
